NEWKIRK ANNOUNCES THE CREATION OF PARTICIPANT INVESTOR SERVICES
Company consolidates education and information services under a single brand

ALBANY, NY, November 30, 2004 — Newkirk, a leading financial services information provider, today announced the creation of Newkirk Participant Investor Services (NPIS), a single source retirement plan participant information, education, and advice solution.

Newkirk Participant Investor Services includes investment guidance provided by GuidancePlus[™], investment advice offered through AdvicePlus, online viewing of mutual fund prospectuses, semi-annual reports and annual reports, and fund data sheets made available through Newkirk Fund Central, as well as additional online tools and educational content.

“The services offered as part of Newkirk Participant Investor Services will greatly benefit our clients,” says Pete Newkirk, president of Newkirk. “These services for participants in self-directed retirement plans are highly effective and cost-efficient, and they’re available on an integrated or à la carte basis,” he added.

“We view these services as ancillary to Newkirk’s broader mission of providing effective participant education. Providers are increasingly looking at participant communication and education holistically. Newkirk offers a comprehensive communication solution, of which the components of NPIS are only a part. Education, guidance, advice, and such other participant communications as prospectuses, confirmations, and the like are more effective if they're part of an integrated system," he continued.

Newkirk Participant Investor Services are integrated within the NewkirkOne participant communication platform. NewkirkOne effectively uses individualized messaging and message management to move participants down a pathway toward a comfortable retirement. The steps on that pathway include increasing deferrals and improving asset allocation. The NPIS services are one piece in the integrated communication puzzle.
